

Dear Students, Families and Colleagues,

As we near the end of term and the end of a very different academic year, it is important to reflect on the challenges we have faced, what barriers we have overcome and how we have grown as students and adults. As I reflect on this year, I realise that although there have been many barriers to our normal way of life, a virtual world has given us the opportunity to get involved in things that we may not have had the opportunity to do before.

The careers world is adapting and we will be keeping a close eye on how the Labour Markets have changed for the positive and the negative and plan to share this with students next academic year. However, the positives to come out of this challenging year is understanding how experiences enable you to better yourself, to grow as an individual, to allow you to stand out from the crowd are even more important than they once were. This bulletin gives you opportunities to develop your interests, life skills and an understanding of real jobs to better your CV, along with lots of other interesting experiences which I really encourage you to take advantage of.

As always, please feel free to contact me. Macaulaye@haileyburyturnford.com 01992 308 333 ext: 311

Yours faithfully,

Mr E. Macaulay

Morgan Sindall & Lungfish Careers 'Virtual' Visit Thursday 1st July

HT had a visit from three colleagues who are all directly involved in our new building. Our students had speeches, mini presentations and Q&A with three different employers of Morgan Sindall and Lungfish; Site Manager, Architect and Interior Designer.

Each spokesperson gave insight into their responsibilities, day to day duties, career pathway into the job, key skills the job needs and things they enjoy about working in the industry.

Irina, the Site Manager explains how she started off as a Site Engineer on an apprenticeship and has progressed to a position with more responsibility. Site Engineers tend to look at drawings, transported to the site, how to set up the building, look into information for the build and quality assure the process, however it became a bit repetitive and moved into management, which involves a lot more communication with clients.

Kieran and Hannah, the Architect and Designer had a relatively similar experience coming into the job, they went to university and did a training year whilst at university, which gave them real work experience and an insight into the job. Both Kieran and Hannah work for Lungfish, who are employed by Morgan Sindall, they tend to work on the design of new buildings and extensions. Lungfish specialise in education and design. Their roles include taking a brief and then create a plan and a vision for the project. They provide that information to contractors. A wide range of excellent communication is needed, as they sit in board rooms and discuss ideas and they liaise with contractors and clients regularly. The positives are they get to travel all over the country, they get to see projects from the start to the finish and feel proud of what they achieve. Lead designers work with all designers to check issues and resolve them before it goes to the client and contractors. Interior designers work on the finish, the floor and walls and the aesthetics.

Question and Answer with Year 10:

Q. What would you say have been your biggest personal and professional challenges when progressing in your career?

A. Learning as you go. Getting involved when you can. Dealing with people.

Q. What would starting salaries be for your roles? (e.g. apprenticeship level) and what would the progression look like here?

A. £12-15000 and up to £40/50000, however if you were self employed this can go up and down a lot. Huge scope of salaries.

Q. What are the transferable skills you have developed in your jobs that you could take into a different career?

A. Communication! Visual and verbal. Body language, business operating skills, emails/telephone, addressing clients

Thank you to Morgan Sindall for arranging this talk, I know our Year 10 students took a lot from this experience.
