Checking Progress

Sometimes the government will hold referendums on specific issues which allow people to vote directly on that issue. Recent examples include the Brexit referendum in 2016 and the Scottish independence referendum in 2014.

Explanation

In Scotland the voting age was lowered in 2013 which meant that anyone aged 16 or 17, with a Scottish address, is allowed to vote in Scottish-only elections and in Wales over-16s can vote in Welsh-only elections too. Labour also promised to lower the voting age if they won the election in 2024, which they did.

But what do you think? Is 16 too young, too old or just right? And is it fair that some parts of the UK let you vote from 16 while others don't?

Should 16-year-olds be allowed to vote?

Explanation

There have only ever been 3 referendums held across the whole of the UK:

- 1975 - Do you think that the United Kingdom should stay in the European Community (the Common Market)?
- 2011 – Should we replace the current FPTP electoral system with the Alternative Vote system?
- 2016 - Should the United Kingdom remain a member of the European Union or leave the European Union?

Should we have more referendums?

Does the media determine general election results?

Box 1 The Sun's 'golden era'

The Sun, with a peak daily readership of 4 million in the second half of the twentieth century, claimed to win elections. Since 1979, The Sun has consistently endorsed the winner of every UK election and in 1992 claimed 'It Was The Sun Wot Won It', insisting it put voters off Labour's Neil Kinnock. One aspect of New Labour's landslide victory in 1997 was Tony Blair's befriending of The Sun's owner, Rupert Murdoch, to obtain that newspaper's backing. Its return to endorsing the Conservatives in 2010 arguably enabled David Cameron's victory.

Outrage at seriously posh lunch MPs can scoff in Houses of Parliament for just £4.52
'Compare this to the free school meal allowance and it honestly makes me ashamed of them all'

Should we be paying for MPs lunches?

According to Open Democracy, between 2018 and 2021 food prices in the House of Commons have been reduced by £1 on average, with the taxpayer footing a £17m bill in subsidies over the same period

Summer holiday task!

A great basic activity to start developing your political literacy is to keep a Current Affairs Diary over the summer holidays. Each morning you should listen to, watch or read what is going on in the country.

In your diary note down one of the top news stories, including a brief outline of what has happened.

At the end of each fortnight you must select one of these stories and write a short editorial on it. This should include:

- An objective explanation of the issue, including how it has progressed across the week.
- Opinions from different viewpoints.
- Your opinion – including where applicable alternative solutions to the problem or issue being criticised.

Try to include a mixture of stories about both UK and US politics.

We will be developing our own current affairs diaries on the course next year so this is a good chance to get a taste for it!
